The Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite (UARS): Legal Issues Arising?

The uncertainty that the uncontrolled re-entry of the Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite (UARS) on 23 September 2011 once again brings into focus the need for the United Nations to consider legal issues related to outer space on an international basis. It needs to bring about the setting of outer space jurisdictional limits for nations as well as the setting of the dividing line between outer space and air space (the latter of which is already governed by a number of Conventions which outer space is not) in particular. It also needs to work on creating legal certainty for those that venture commercially into outer space and private entities that may be detrimentally affected by the use of outer space for commercial purposes. We at Pysdens together with our associate research unit “TheHouseofBranchofGold” have been looking into these current areas of legal uncertainty with a view to putting forward potential resolutions concerning such issues arising now and in the future.
